Action On Bill May Come In January

Possible Pay Hike Stalled

Congressional action on a proposal that would mean a military pay hike got sidetracked in the end-of-the-year logjam and the measure is stalled at least until late January.

The House of Representatives and the Senate failed in attempts to get together on a version of a civil service pay raise and this disagreement blocked immediate action on a military pay boost.

Military pay is automatically raised every time civil service employees receive an increase.

The House passed a raise first and the Senate followed with a more conservative version. The differences meant a compromise and the legislators could not solve the problem prior to the Christmas recess.

President Richard Nixon has insisted that any employee bill must include a provision establishing a postal corporation or he will exercise his veto powers. The chief executive has also said any "inflationary" measures would not get his stamp of approval.

The chairmen of both the House and Senate Civil Service committees have announced that their plans do not call for incorporating a pay raise and the postal corporation in the same bill.

The Senate-passed measure, which calls for a smaller pay hike, would mean a 4.3 per cent raise—if it stays in its present form on the long trip through legislative channels.

Navy Times predicts the final version will come closer to resembling the Senate measure because of Nixon's anti-inflation campaign. However, lobby groups for the postal unions are exerting pressure that supports the House-passed bill.

The Senate bill loads the big raises in the lower end of the pay scale and averages out to 3.2 per cent. The Department of Defense formula would translate this figure into a 4.3 per cent across-the-board increase.

Even though the present law would make the raise automatically effective for the

Reports On Cut 'Exaggerated'

A Marine Corps spokesman has called reports that the Corps will reduce in strength by 100,000 in fiscal year 1971 "vastly exaggerated."

Col. C. B. Armstrong, Jr., who heads the Corps' personnel plans and programs, told Navy Times that "We have not discussed a number anywhere near that amount for FY-71."

The figure first appeared in a Washington newspaper, which said "manpower will be cut by 100,000 men under the 1971 budget to be sent to Congress next month."

Col. Armstrong, although not denying the possibility of some manpower cuts, said he wasn't free to disclose any of the budget figures until Congress receives them.

"But if there's a continued withdrawal from WesPac,

Kim Training At Montford Point

Student-Lieutenant Calls Vietnam Home

By LCPL. DON ABOOD

Many student Marines at the Motor Transport School will be going to Vietnam after completion of training, but only one who considers the country his home.

He is 1stLt. Nguyen Xuan Kim, a member of the Vietnamese Marine Corps, currently enrolled in the officers' course at the Montford Point School.

Kim came to the U.S. a year ago for training following his enlistment in the Vietnamese Marines, a potent force of over 10,000 men which is playing a major role in Vietnamization of the war.

He spent his first 16 weeks in language school at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas, mastering the English language. From there, he went to Marine Corps Base, Quantico, to receive the same training every Marine officer gets prior to his commissioning.

Following graduation from Basic School came more training — on-the-job with the 2d Motor Transport Battalion, 2d Marine Division at Camp Lejeune. Kim's present schooling is designed to familiarize him completely with all facets of Motor Transport operation — an operation not entirely strange to the 27-year-old lieutenant.

While a second lieutenant in the Army of the Republic of Vietnam, Kim served as executive officer of an infantry company and also as a motor transport officer leading truck convoys along enemy infested highways.

He received his first military schooling at the National Academy Army School in South Vietnam and served seven years (five in motor transport) with the ARVN prior to joining the

New Year Song

Solved every problem with beginnings
Of projects in general, correction
On drawing boards, low-cal diet for thinnings —
All in a better direction.

Shut up the windows when winter came burly,
Spread wide the full-length of curtain
To let in a picturesque downdraft of early
Snow outside the pane glass, and flirtin'...

Slammed lightly screen door continues an hour
And shrills up the spine but twice,
Then action inside dismisses the cower
With tales of quick laughter and spice.

Freedom Calls For Education

Traditionally, New Year's eve is the time for resolutions. And just as traditionally, New Year's day is the time for forgetting them.

It would seem a silly practice—making promises to ourselves only to break them—but perhaps the ritual serves to prove that we know "there's room for improvement."

Let us suppose, just for the sake of argument, that this is the year we decide to begin work on that degree, take out that USAFI course or look into educational benefits in general.

These are fine resolutions, each recognizing a need for improvement and each directed at doing something about it.

This particular New Year is perhaps more appropriate than most for making such pervasive, long-range resolutions. We are, after all, about to embark upon not just a new year but a new decade. And if the decade past is any guide to the future, education will be of increasing importance in the '70s.

It has become trite to say "education is the key to the future," yet the axiom is so true that it warrants repeating. It cannot be said often enough if only because time and technology make it increasingly meaningful and increasingly true.

Each individual owes it to himself to keep pace with the tremendous advances in technology and human goals. This is particularly true of those who serve in defense of democracy's birthplace, because freedom depends on education.

As Thomas Jefferson put it, "If you expect a nation to be ignorant and free, you expect what never was and never will be."

Individuality Survives Age After Age After Age

We make a lot of the end of a year or the end of a decade. I'm sure the end of the century will be a big thing. These are artificial divisions—helpful for dating memoranda and filing taxes, but, still, arbitrary divisions in our continuing living.

We are going to have to come up with answers to problems in '70 as we did in '69. Many of the questions will carry over.

What is happening in the city? What is America doing? Where do I fit in as a citizen of the United States? What is my role as a man, or a woman, or a child? Where am I going, and where are we all going?

Just as the cells in the body change, some ending and some beginning, so the units of life and civilization change. I may have a lot of replacements of cells before I die; and this age of man may have been altered completely before we realize that one age has been replaced by another.

Ages are named by empires and trends and emphasis—Roman, Iron, Industrial, Space. People go on living all through them.

It is this "on-living" that is important, for while each age has its label, people are still individuals and persons. They live from birth to death with the same basic needs and possibilities age after age after age.

If we pretend that all of the people are a part of the big label we recognize these basic needs, but we forget about taste and ambition and all of the wonderful components of personality.

Don't knock the age. The age is a field in which personality is cultivated; it is a test tube in which the culture is examined closely and carefully. The past is grand, and the present is exciting, and the future is our chance to make good.

There is nothing new about the great generation gap—it's just that we realize it or talk about it now. The gap would be more comfortable if two generations would look at each other and listen to each other.

Probably because we only had one photograph per family we used to listen to each other's music. Now, we turn off what we've never tried to understand.

This is living—this day and tomorrow and next year and the century after. The end of a unit of time is no big thing. Persons are big. You and I and he and she are relevant and important and special. The presence of God in each human being is sufficient in itself to demand our attention.

The fact that God gave us individuality is most important. This and every age is God's Generation. If you are going to make a resolution let it be simple—LISTEN. The last sounds you hear tonight may be very important the first thing tomorrow morning.

Safety Still Major Disadvantage

The year 1969 is history now and a new year lies ahead. As the pace of scientific technology accelerates, we will be blessed by the advantages of the new year and plagued by the disadvantages.

Naturally, we are as concerned with the disadvantages as we are thankful for the advantages.

Health and safety have become major issues in recent years—in some cases they are major disadvantages of advancing technology. Polluted air, smog, polluted water, waste of natural resources and over population—these are but a few of the problems we face today.

On the other hand, there are a great many inventive people in the Armed Forces who produce substantial savings each year by applying what is generally known as "good old American ingenuity."

Within each of the services, there are men and women whose technical skill and imagination have met formidable challenges. What is to say this tremendous potential cannot be applied to national issues—such as health and safety?

Rewards for suggestions that are accepted are given on an individual basis. Those that represent the greatest savings receive the most personal and monetary recognition.

Individuals can receive up to $25,000 for a suggestion and the Government will patent an invention for the inventor without cost to him. In such cases, royalties can result in many more dollars to the individual inventor.

So, use some of that good old American ingenuity. The next time you work on your car engine, or jet-engine, or drink a glass of water, or go fishing, or see smoke rising from an incinerator—think of a way to help—and submit your suggestion.

Transition Key To Future

This is it! You are about to find out how the Marine Corps, through Project Transition, can help you develop your vocational goals.

The basic goal of Transition is to provide an opportunity for you to learn a skill, or upgrade a skill during the period six months prior to your termination from the service once you have determined that you do not desire to remain in the service.

Your introduction to Project Transition will come six months from your EAS when you fill out a Project Transition questionnaire.

All personnel, whether or not you are sure of leaving the service and whether or not you desire Transition, will fill out this questionnaire at your unit.

From this questionnaire, higher headquarters will schedule a counseling session for you if you desire transition training. The counseling session is designed to give you a detailed description of transition courses available and help you decide whether you would like to pursue one of the courses offered.

Although the counseling session will give you the first details of courses offered, the below courses are given now so that you may get an idea of the program:

AUTOMOBILE MECHANIC: 3 months at Onslow Technical Institute.
ELECTRICIAN: 3 months at Onslow Technical Institute.
TV REPAIR: 3 months at Onslow Technical Institute.

Formal Course Available Through Transition:
POSTAL CLERK-CARRIER: One week on base.

NCR BUSINESS MACHINES: Four weeks, evenings on base.

FORD AUTOMOTIVE MECHANIC COURSE: Six weeks on base.

GOODYEAR STORE CREDIT MANAGER: Four weeks on base.

Thirty Days On-The-Job Training Available Through Transition:
Heavy Equipment operator-mechanic, forestry, plumber, telephone repair, retail sales-accounting, carpentry, bakery.

Caution Urged In Using 'Tooth Whiteners'

(Editor's note: The 22nd annual National Children's Dental Health Week falls in early February this year. As a part of the observance, the Globe today begins a series of six articles on facts that you should know about dental health.)

Can you recommend a good toothpaste? I am confused as to whether I should buy a toothpaste for my family that will whiten their teeth, prevent decay or kill germs.

A dentifrice's role in oral hygiene is to act as an aid to the toothbrush in cleaning teeth. In addition, certain dentifrices have proven decay-preventive qualities. These toothpastes are recommended for use—especially by children—by the American Dental Association.

The ADA classifies and evaluates therapeutic dentifrices; that is, those toothpastes which claim to improve oral health. Since 1960, when the Association first recognized on dentifrice as "an effective decay preventive," only a handful of toothpastes have been approved. All approved dentifrices carry the ADA statement.

These dentifrices are effective but the extent of their effectiveness depends upon the user. To obtain maximum protection against decay, you should brush your teeth as soon as possible after eating, even after snacks.

However, even approved dentifrices are not cure-alls. They are designed only as aids in combating decay and will not substitute for fluoridation of community water supplies and regular visits to the dentist.

Some of the newer additions to the dentifrice market are the so-called tooth whiteners. The ADA has commented on these toothpastes as follows: "

"There has been a recent tendency to promote dentifrices on the basis of their ability to whiten or brighten teeth. Such claims appear to relate almost exclusively to the incorporation in the dentifrices of harsher abrasive agents. Depending on the level of abrasive present, dentifrices can be prepared which may be excessively harsh for regular use by the general public."

The ADA especially warns against use of such dentifrices by dental patients with exposed dentin or cementum or by patients who have tooth restorations constructed of soft synthetic materials. Dentin is the calcified tissue beneath the enamel of the tooth, and cementum is the relatively thin tissue covering the roots of teeth.

Before using the tooth whitening pastes, the ADA suggests asking advice of a dentist.

One other comment on types of dentifrices: The so-called "bacteria killer" dentifrices have not been found effective either in reducing the number of decay-causing bacteria in the mouth or in combating decay.

It is advisable to provide an approved fluoride dentifrice, especially for children. Everyone should brush immediately after eating and should see a dentist for regular checkups.

The All-Marine trophy came after a first place trophy for the Camp Lejeune contest. Vallee captured the scene while serving with 3d Combined Action Group, 3d Marine Amphibious Force, in Vietnam. He currently serves with Headquarters Company, 8th Marines.

FT Marines Become 'Foster Fathers' To Georgia Orphans

By LCPL. DON ABOOD
Force Troops' 2d Tank Battalion is a father.

A foster father, that is, to 35 youngsters of Boys Estate, Ga. Father and "sons" first met on Thanksgiving while the battalion was at Ft. Stewart, Ga., conducting a field-firing operation.

The Marines, located at a base camp 35 miles deep in the wilderness, had counted on spending a lonely Thanksgiving away from home, but CWO Richard Plunkett's idea changed that.

Plunkett suggested bringing some orphans to the base to share a turkey dinner with the Marines. Assisted by chaplains and other Marines, Plunkett located Boys Estate and arranged to have the youngsters brought to the base camp.

There, the boys were treated to Thanksgiving dinner, rides on equipment and a tour of the Leatherneck facilities. They were also given something more important — companionship.

"These boys are lonely," said SgtMaj. O.P. Shea. "They asked every man to write them. If we don't give them something, they don't have a future."

To help solve some of the youngster's immediate problems the battalion and members of "A" Company, 2d Anti-Tank Battalion, 2d Marine Division, who were also at Ft. Stewart, donated $351.60 worth of clothes to Boys Estate. Each youngster was given new shoes, socks, a shirt, and a sweater.

The tankers intend to make the Christmas gifts an annual affair and have already collected over $23 for the 1970 Yuletide season.

Nor will the boys be forgotten on their birthdays. Shea has a list of all the youngsters' birthdays and the battalion will mail cards to each to let the kids know that they're not abandoned.

Marines, said Shea, have a habit of helping unfortunate children around the world. Now, added the Sergeant Major, "we'll do it at home."

Shea and many of the tankers have established a very personal relationship with their "sons."

"I wouldn't mind having Mike (one of the boys) around the house all the time," said Sgt. Francis Vining, 29 and married.

Asked what the Marines could really do to help the kids at Boys Estate become part of the future, Vining, without hesitation, answered: "We can keep them in shoes and clothes and we'd gladly do it any day of the week. Those kids have two strikes against them and we're trying to keep them from getting that third strike."

Takes Year Of Paperwork

Captain Cuts Red Tape To Adopt Asian Girl

By SGT. GEORGE BROADLEY
DA NANG, Vietnam—Capt. Frank D. Strong, Headquarters, 5th Communication Bn. (rein), has started his own "People to People" program. He has adopted Hua Thi Kim-Thanh, a two-year-old Vietnamese orphan. Nancy Kim Strong, Hua's new adopted name, now has three American sisters and a brother. Ironically, the four children named their new sister Nancy Kim, even before they knew that Kim was already a part of Nancy's Vietnamese name. "This fact in itself was enough to convince me that this adoption was meant to be," the captain said.

Just after he arrived in Vietnam, he decided to see what his wife would think about an addition to their family. His answer came back in the form of five individual letters. Each of his children and his wife wrote back saying, "Yes!"

With the family at home already making decisions like where Nancy was going to sleep and where she was going to sit at the table, Capt. Strong started to fill out the paperwork involved in an American adopting a Vietnamese child.

This sorting out of red tape, took almost Capt. Strong's complete tour to legally change Hua Thi's name to Nancy Kim.

Not only must Vietnamese law be satisfied with the parents' worth and stability, but the American authorities also make investigation to assure that the prospective family also meets American adoption regulations.

Nancy is currently at the Angel of St. Paul Orphanage on the outskirts of Da Nang. The nuns in charge of the orphanage belong to the Order called the Sisters of St. Paul de Chartres, which has been in Vietnam since 1906, and the orphanage has been open since May 1947. Here Nancy will stay until Capt. Strong's tour is completed.

He said that it takes almost a year to complete all the required paperwork. The visa for Nancy's entrance into the U.S. will be the last document. The visa will be issued in the captain's last month in Vietnam.

"Anyone who has adopted a child in the States can appreciate the huge amounts of paperwork involved, but over here that paperwork load is at least doubled," Strong said.

At least two peculiarities in Vietnamese adoption laws are that both parents must be more than 30-years-old and that they have been married, to each other, for at least 10 years.

With the "Red Tape" at last cut through, Capt. Frank Strong is eagerly looking towards the near future, when he and little Nancy Kim board their "Freedom Bird" and wing their way home to Santa Rosa, Calif.

Politics Still Appeal To 24-Year-Old PFC

By SGT. JOHNNY QUAGLIA
DA NANG, Vietnam—Politics has an image of glamour and excitement for PFC Skip Roberts who is currently serving with Force Logistic Command.

The 24-year-old Marine knows that the essential business of politics is done "behind the scenes." It is the store fronts, the campaign headquarters, the hotel suites that the effort to ensure success is made.

Roberts is familiar with all aspects of politics since first getting involved with Youth for Kennedy in 1960.

He went on to major in International Affairs at Washington D.C.'s Georgetown University, where he became a participant in national politics.

Working for his then Connecticut Congressman Don Irwin, he was also involved on campus as College Young Democrat President. Then taking up a fellowship at Brazil's Universidade De Sao Paulo em Assis, Skip spent 1966 studying Portuguese and Brazilian history, while teaching English to Brazilian high school students.

Returning to the states, he spent four months as a VISTA recruiter, then returned to finish school in 1967-68.

With strong convictions on the issues facing the nation, Skip went to work from the very beginning in Senator Eugene J. McCarthy's 1968 presidential campaign.

"I logged quite a few miles and hours in his quest 'before New Hampshire', to the bitter after-hours of the Chicago convention," Skip said.

Roberts spent two months in Ohio in former U.S. Representative John Gilligan's U.S. Senate campaign before returning to the New York area, where he signed up as an aide to U.S. Representative Jim Scheuer (D-Bronx, N.Y.) and commuted between New York and Washington, D.C.

Skip was inducted into the Marine Corps in February 1969 and is presently working as an issuing clerk for FLC Special Services. His job is to see that all units get their quotas of everything from air conditioners and Christmas cards to pool tables and exercise weights.

It's a long and tedious job, but an essential one in the campaign to keep up the morale of all FLC's Marines scattered throughout I Corps.

And after the Marines? Skip hedges a bit. "maybe law school, I'm really not sure yet." And how about being a candidate himself someday? "It's a possibility. If enough support was there for me and my stand on the issues, I just might take the plunge."

The excitement and the glamour of a political life are still with Roberts, but his experiences in the Marine Corps will also linger on... and on... and on...

69-Pound 'King' Is Quick Ruler

By CPL. JULIUS BROWN
TAM KY, Vietnam—The word "king" is usually associated with a male ruler of a major territory. There is a "king" here, known to Marines from Tam Ky to Quang Ngai as one who rules any area he travels.

This king is a black and tan, 69-pound German Shepherd sentry dog that has trampled Vietnam's jungles and rice paddies for nearly four years with Marines. He has been trained to detect and attack. His diligence has reaped a ransom in saved Marine lives.

King is currently sniffing out enemy activity for the CAP (Combined Action Platoon) Marines and Vietnamese Popular Force militia near here. His present handler, Cpl. Walter Rebacz, 3d Military Police Battalion, has worked with King for seven months now and insists that he owes his life to the alertness of his canine comrade.

"I have had plenty of combat experiences with King," said Rebacz, "and he has always come through for me."

"One night, while on an ambush patrol with CAP 1-45, King alerted and tipped us off to an ambush that the enemy were about to spring. The Viet Cong (VC) were occupying three positions in the ambush site and King alerted on all three."

"We opened fire first, wounding one enemy and scattering the others. They headed for the hills and we resumed our patrol. King had saved the night for us."

King's German Shepherd ancestry may have been mixed with Pointer or Irish Setter, because his alert to his handler is the classic bird dog stance.

"When King gets a whiff of the enemy, he goes tense all over," explained Rebacz. "He freezes in place, raises a front paw, and turns his head in the direction of the enemy."

"If there is enemy equipment around, he holds fast. But if there are any enemy personnel, he lowers his body close to the ground and becomes anxious for me to turn him loose. I usually keep him on leash if a fire fight ensues."

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Lejeune Athletes Enjoy Success During 1969

ON THE TRACK — Gunnery Sergeant Guadalupe Saldivar Jr. breaks the tape August 9 and becomes the first Camp Lejeune Marine to run 500 miles.

The year 1969 was a good one for Lejeune athletes. Over the past year, these pages have recorded a great many things. The thrill of victory and the agony of defeat were both very much a part of Camp Lejeune's own wide world of sports.

Our boxing team was perhaps the most successful. The advent of the year saw an All-Marine boxing squad composed entirely of Lejeune Marines.

Ray Russell went on to win the Inter-Service lightweight crown, and Larry Carlisle pounded his way to a thrilling victory in the National AAU Tournament. James Parks very recently won a silver medal in the Grecian CISM Games, an International event.

Eighth Marines - Anti-Tank Bn. won this year's FMFLant Football Tournament, giving Lejeune its first FMFLant trophy in five years.

Three members of the Base Skeet Team, LtCol. Larry Drennan, Capt. Rick Wilson and MSgt. Don Kirsak were part of the Marine team which won the World Military Skeet Championship in August.

The Lejeune High Devilpups won the Coastal Plains 2-A Football Championship, repeating last year's performance, and last but not least, on September 9, GySgt. Guadalupe Saldivar Jr. became the first Camp Lejeune Marine to run 500 miles.

Fighters Drop Rematch With Fort Bragg

By CPL. ANDY BYRNES
The Fort Bragg Boxing Team evened the score with the Lejeune fighters December 19 by virtue of a 6-4 victory on their home grounds. Earlier in the month, the Marine sluggers scored an impressive 8-3 victory over the Army team at Goettge Memorial Field House.

Frank Santore and Jimmy Ham turned in Lejeune's most impressive performances of the night, scoring unanimous decisions over Clyde Winston and Tommy Roland respectively.

Santore, although only in his first year with the team, has become one of the most consistent fighters on the squad. The win marks his third straight since suffering a split decision loss against the Raleigh inmates at Raleigh.

Ham is no stranger to Roland, this latest bout being their fourth joust. Ham dropped the first two by split decisions, but won the third by virtue of a split verdict. "Sweet" Jimmy removed all doubts of his prowess by defeating Roland soundly on his home grounds.

Lejeune's Pedro Guerrero scored a split decision over Paulo Mikalele. The win was Guerrero's second over the Army fighter.

Lamont Marshall, fighting in the middleweight class, dropped a split decision to Bragg's Donald Powell. It was Marshall's first loss in three trips into the ring.

Newcomer George Hill lost a split decision to Leonido Wehbe. The fight was Hill's first bout as a Marine.

Lejeune's Chris Kibbe and Charles Johnston both lost unanimous decisions.

Kibbe dropped his second in a row to Jacob Mathews and Johnston succumbed to James Allen.

Welterweight Julius Spell and heavyweight Wallace Moore dropped unanimous decisions to Henry Perez and Loutenant Davis respectively.

Moore had previously beaten Davis by virtue of a split decision during a home match.

Fighters Needed

Several months ago, a plea went out to the personnel aboard Camp Lejeune. The plea was for men to fight on the Marine Corps Boxing Team.

As always, there were Marines answering the call, but not as many as needed.

Now, with the All-Marine trials and the Inter-Service Tournament coming up in the near future, the team is again in need of fighters.

The team needs men with experience, whether it be experience in Golden Gloves, the amateur ranks, or the neighborhood boxing gym.

The offer should not be taken lightly. It doesn't look good when Marines lose in the ring, especially to another service team, and perhaps you could make the difference. Don't sell yourself short.

Battalion and Company commanding officers are urged to contact any man under his command with boxing experience, and recommend that he try out for the team.

If fighting as a Marine can't be considered a privilege, if one possesses the ability it should be considered a duty.

Trials will be held in the boxing room at the field house January 26-31 anytime between 9 a.m. and 4:30. Interested personnel should contact GySgt. Rocky Winstead.

Engineers Demonstrate Combat Effectiveness

By PFC ANDY SMITH

The 8th Engineers Battalion, Force Troops, demonstrated its combat effectiveness in a training exercise which pitted a platoon of guerrillas against two platoons of "government" troops who were heli-lifted to suppress guerrilla activity and protect a nearby city.

With the first helicopter landing, the friendly troops found the landing zone buzzing with enemy activity and received sniper fire from a tree line which bordered the area.

Under the command of Capt. R.L. Capeci, the engineers quickly set up a perimeter defense and returned fire into the tree line. Suspecting a large guerrilla concentration nearby, Capt. Capeci radioed for reinforcements, and 15 minutes later, a Sea Knight helicopter set down, unloading another squad of fresh troops.

With the perimeter reinforced, the volume of small arms fire from both sides increased and Capt. Capeci directed his radioman to call in artillery fire.

After the artillery rounds began pounding the tree line, the enemy fire quickly diminished.

Later the enemy launched a human-wave assault on the perimeter, but, with the aid of well-positioned M-60 machine guns, the attack was repelled and the enemy escaped down an isolated trail.

Capt. Capeci gave the order to pursue the enemy.

Familiar with guerrilla tactics, he ordered a mine-sweeping team to check out the trail. His suspicions were confirmed and the engineers put their technical know-how to good use in finding and disarming several anti-tank and anti-personnel mines.

A recon team was sent to check out a well-used side trail and returned with information that a large number of guerrillas were hurriedly breaking camp. An envelopment platoon circled the rear of the enemy camp, while the remainder of the engineers prepared for an assault.

Gaining the advantage of surprise over the fleeing guerrillas, the engineers won an overwhelming victory and concluded "successful exercise" for the guerrilla platoon, said Capt. Capeci.

"It did what I intended it to do," Capt. Capeci said. "I thought the mine sweeping procedure was the best part, as it proved the ability of engineers in the field to deal with tactics being employed by the Viet Cong in Vietnam."

then of course we'll have a reduction of forces," the colonel told Navy Times. At this time, however, he said "we have no idea of the numbers or percentages involved."

The current Marine Corps strength is in the vicinity of 310,000 and is expected to be reduced to approximately 294,000 by June 30 under a 20,300-man cut ordered in September.

Congress Fails To Agree On Increases For GI Bill

Congress adjourned for its Christmas recess last week without completing its work on legislation that would boost veterans' educational allowances under the GI Bill.

The House of Representatives attempted to compromise on the measure, but the Senate turned down the proposal, sticking to its 46 per cent increase.

The House, which originally passed a bill calling for a 27 per cent increase, offered a 32 per cent figure for a compromise, but the upper chamber voted to continue the push for its version and requested a conference committee to further examine the proposals.

However, time did not permit conference meetings and the committee won't get together until after Congress returns to work this month. Thus, there is no chance for an increase for the next school semester.

President Richard Nixon had told the Senate that he considered the 46 per cent figure inflationary and hinted that he would veto the measure should it pass Congress.

Rep. Olin Teague, chairman of the House Veterans Affairs committee, noted the veto possibility in presenting his committee's compromise measure to the House and said he was "more interested in gaining passage of a bill that can be signed into law than in passing a bill with higher rates which would involve a veto and a lengthy delay in final enactment."

Lt. Kim Praises Training

Vietnamese Marines in 1967.
His stay in the U.S. has been an education for Americans lucky enough to know him.

Second Lieutenant Gary

Lapier, also a student at the school, said, "He's really concerned for his future and that of his country. During one ten-minute break following a class quiz, he went over his exam to see what questions he missed and why. It's a small thing, but it gives you an insight into the man."

"He's not trying to build an image. He's just showing you exactly who he is — another human being — and he puts out totally."

"I would like to see more Vietnamese trained in the United States," said Kim. "Especially in motor transport and artillery. If the United States keeps training the Vietnamese, then we can be better equipped to take over following President Nixon's withdrawal of troops."

"This is a very good school. It has a lot of training aids and good instructors. I expect to gain a lot of experience here."

Inquiring Photographer

The Inquiring Photographer visited the Central Exchange Monday afternoon and asked the following question:

"With 1969 on its way out and 1970 just around the corner, what do you have in mind for a New Year's Resolution?"

Pvt. Ronald Rojas, Echo Co., 2-2: "This year I'm going to think twice before jumping into things. I'm also going to keep a closer watch on my spending."

LCpl. Frank McArthur, Echo Co., 2-2: "My resolution will be to try and help the people in this country who are living in poverty. I want to help them fight their war, too."

Sgt. Thomas Manuel "I" Co., 3-6: "My resolution is to go back to school. As a result of being in the service for the last three years, I haven't had the opportunity to increase my knowledge or educational level."

PFC Jerome Catchings, "C" Co., 1-2: "My resolution for the coming year is to be nicer to the Women Marines."

Sgt. Pete Crosby, H&S Co., 2d Service Bn.: "The things that I liked about last year I'll attempt to do again in the coming year. The things that I didn't like, I'll try to eliminate."

Pay Bill Considered

military, Navy Times reports that the Defense Department has another choice which it considers more desirable.

Assistant Secretary of Defense Roger Kelley has pointed out that servicemen with less than two years in the military lag farther behind civilian contemporaries than men in higher grades.

Thus, Defense may employ the Senate thinking (bigger raises for lower grade workers) and request Congress to make the military increase selective.
